About Scottish Autism

2018 is an important year for Scottish Autism as we celebrate our 50th anniversary. Established in 1968 by a group of parents, Scottish Autism is now the largest provider of autism-specific services in Scotland and a leading authority and advocate for good autism practice. We exist to help those diagnosed with autism to lead full and enriched lives and become valuable members of the community they live in.

In our 50th year we want to engage with others who share our ambition to promote practice based evidence, recognise the value of the lived experience of autistic people and believe that it is time to debate what evidence could and should be considered when providing services that aim to deliver an individualised, personalised approach as opposed to models of treatment or intervention.

We are holding an international two-day conference with the aim of providing a platform for sharing visionary approaches to the development of autism practice.
